It's good sportsmanship to not pick up lost golf balls while they are still rolling.

Mark Twain

Don't read this if you are a bit sensitive

Player gets a birdie two. Forgets a shot and claims a hole in one. Just doesn't happen does it. A beginner takes a 10 but forgets a shot and claims a nine. Happens all the time. Seldom a cheat – just a bit forgetful or not very good at mathematics Ball past white post with black top and player chips from there onto green. Probably not a cheat – just no idea of golf rules. If he asks he will learn.

A Player knows the rules but drops his ball to his advantage at a point which is not really the nearest point of relief. The totally honest golfer is at a disadvantage.

Doesn't return card for handicapping purposes. Who's he kidding – not the handicapper – most likely himself.

Knows the rules but grounds club in hazard and hopes no one is watching. No penalty called – a bit sneaky.

Always plays identically marked balls with one being warmed in his pocket. Makes sure to get to search area first. Never loses a ball and rarely stymied by a tree. Maybe this bloke takes cheating quite seriously.

Knows the rules and abides by them always. Calls penalties on himself even though his marker did not see him accidentally move his ball half a centimetre.

How do you rate in the eyes of your fellow golfers?
Someone is sure to be watching.
